STRANGE PIECE OF FREIGHT.

BROKERS FIND ONE OF THEIR COLLEAGUES IN A HAPPY CONDITION AS A RESULT OF THE WAR SCARE, LOAD HIM INTO A WAGON

AND SHIP HIM DOWNTOWN. Several brokers downtown are thinking of applying for permission to carry concealed weapons, as they fear their lives are in danger. Their fear is all the result of the war scare, although it was of their own making and is only remotely connected with the message of President Cleveland, The story came out yesterday and caused much amusement among their friends and acquaint-

On Friday afternoon an Adams Express Company wagon, drawn by two horses, drove up to the front of Peter Hartman's hotel in Whitehallst. The driver entered the barroom and announced that he had a package to deliver to Peter Hartman. Peter is a jovial individual, and he thought some kind patron had sent him a haunch of venison or at leas a big, fat wild turkey. Consequently he wore an expansive smile when he advanced to receive his package.

But the "package" caused trouble. It wanted to stay where it was, in the bottom of the wagon. Villing or unwilling, the driver and the sturdy messenger were bound to do their duty, and grasping their "package"-which, strange as it may seem, had begun to swear-hustled it into Peter's and stood it against the bar.

The driver then threw his receipt-book under the astonished Peter's nose, and pointing his finger at the bottom of a page, said gruffly:

"Sign here, please; $1 charges."
Peter, for the moment, was too paralyzed even to make his mark, so "Eddy," his head barkeeper, did as the expressman said, and paid out the money.

By this time the "package" could talk, and intimated that the driver and messenger could moisten their tongues at his expense. They accepted the invitation and left the place.

A glimmering of the truth began to flit through Peter's dazed brain by this time, and he had the "package" carried to bed. A few moments later two solemn brokers appeared, and the story came out.

two solemn brokers appeared, and the story came out.

The "package," who was a member of the Consolidated Exchange and lived on Staten Island, had been long of the market, and the war scare produced by the President's message, which sent the stocks tumbling on Friday, left him a wreck on the financial sea. With a view to drowning his sorrows, he visited various cafes with the result that he became still more of a wreck, and in this condition some of his fellow-brokers discovered him, and with ghastly rumor decided to befriend him. An Adams Express wagon was called, and, properly tagged "For Peter Hartman, Whitehall-st., City," the man was deposited amil a jot of miscellaneous man was deposited amid a lot of miscellaneous express matter. His journey downtown was a literal dream. After a few hours' sleep the whillow package descended to the bar, and after one of "Eddy's" bracers felt refreshed anough whilom package descended to the bar, and after one of "Eddy's" bracers felt refreshed enough to ask: "Where am I at?" Upon being told where, when and how he came there, he used language that startled even the frequenters of Peter's place, and strode out of the room.

There's a Consolidated Exchange broker on the warpath, and he is looking for b-1-o-o-d.

TO REPRESENT AMERICAN TRIBES.

SEARCHES BY THE MUSEUM OF NATU-RAL HISTORY-A VALUABLE EXHIBIT.

Extensive preparations have been going on for a long time under the auspices of the trustees of the American Museum of Natural History to establish an anthropological exhibit, which ultimately, hoped, will be one of the largest and finest in the President Morris K. Jesup, who was seen at his home, No. 197 Madison-ave., by a Tribune reporter last evening, said to regard to it: rustees are seeking to discover the origin of humin life in the Western Hemisphere, and especially on the Continent of North America. already had expeditions in Alaska, California and Mexico, and now have one in Peru. which will be clothed in costumes peculiar to the tribes they represent, will be arranged in groups. Villages representing those which the originals built, will be reproduced in minature.

The first group will be of the Kwakiuti tribe of Indians, of whom there are about 5,000 who inhabit the region around Fort Rupert at the extreme northern end of Vancouver Island. This tribe is supposed to have been the first to enter Alaska, and its members strongly resemble the Mongolians in facial peculiarities. It is supposed to have been driven southward by other tribes that afterward went to Alaska. It worships a delty which it says came on earth thousands of years ago.

A photograph, measurements and casts have also been secured by Charles Curtiee, the sole survivor of the Chinok Indians, who were comparatively numerous about fifty years ago. An interesting part of the exhibit will consist of representations of the principal industries of the various tribes.

The earlier groups will be exhibited in the room formerly occupied by specimens of American wood and forestry. They will be transferred to the new wing when it is completed and will have all the space in that structure which may be necessary to make the exhibit complete.

TO SAVE BABIES LIVES.

CHIEF CONLIN TO CHANGE THE SYSTEM OF HANDLING FOUNDLINGS.

Chief of Police Conlin announced last night that he was about to institute a reform concerning the foundlings who are handed to the police.

During each year an average of 150 abandoned infants fall into the hands of the police. They are taken to the nearest station-house, and after being letained there for a few hours on the chance of their being claimed, are sent to Police Headquarters, their being cloimed, are sent to Police Headquarters, where the matron takes care of them until the next day, when they are sent to Ward's Island. The one who finds an infant is compelled to accompany it to the station-house and afterward to Police Headquarters. The following day he is again compelled to visit Headquarters for the purpose of making an affidavit as to the circumstances.

The result of the many transfers and much red tape has been that something like 80 per cent of the children die for lack of prompt medical attention. Chief Conlin proposes to cut away the red tape by having the foundlings immediately forwarded to Bellevue Hospital, and the ones who hand foundlings over to the police will make the affidavits in the station-houses on the spot.

INTEREST IN THE WHITON CASE.

A BIG CROWD APPEARS AT THE EXAMINATION-RUMORS THAT THE DEFENDANT HAS

BEEN FALSELY ACCUSED. The case against Edward N. Whiton, charged with shooting John Clancey at Piermont early Sunday morning, was called for a hearing before Justice Cooke at Sparkill last evening and the courtroom was packed. The prisoner, his father, District-At-torney Comesky and Messrs, Wheeler and Fallon, the two last named representing the defence, were The District-Attorney asked for an adjournment to await the result of Clancey's injuries. He said that he had seen the wounded man in the Hudbeen assured that there was a good chance of

been assured that there was a good chance of his recovery. An adjournment was taken by consent of counsel on both sides until Thursday afternoon, at Nyack.

Some interesting developments are expected at the examination. The impression gained ground in Plermont yesterday that Mr. Whiton did not fire the shot that struck Clancey, and Mr. Wheeler, his counsel, eaid he was fully prepared to prove that fact beyond a doubt. The well-known family to which Mr. Whiton belongs makes the case an especially interesting one to every one in Piermont. His father, William H. Whiton, has been the possessor of a large fortune and lives in a handsome house on the hilltop. He is largely interested in mining stocks, and his son, now under arrest, has also, it is said, made many thousands of dollars in stocks. He formerly held a seat in the New-York Stock Exchange.

MONEY FOR CHARITIES AND CORRECTION. The Board of Estimate resumed work on the budget of 1896 yesterday, and after it had allowed the County Clerk $81,220, the same amount as last year, the appropriations for the Charities and Correction departments were taken up again. The Mayor and his associates in the Board of Estimate were aided by the four Commissioners of the two de-partments, Dr. MacDonald, the Superintendent of the Insane Hospitals; Carl Schurz and a committee of women representing the State Charities Aid As-

EAST RIVER HIS HELLESPONT. A YOUNG STUDENT BREAKS AWAY FROM HIS KEEPER AND SWIMS TO BLACK-WELL'S ISLAND.

Duryea W. Wright, a student living at No. 524 Fifth-ave., as the result of a mad freak plunged into the East River at Seventy-second-st. yesterday forenoon, and despite the ley water and strong tide swam to Blackwell's Island, where he was taken in charge by the officials. Wright lives in the Weiseger apartment-house. He has been there about a month, and the manager of the house said yesterday that he knew little about him except that he came from Little Rock, Ark. that i.e was apparently well supplied with money, and that he was an invalid. Wright has had, during his stay in the house, a nurse who remained with him at all times. The young man is about twenty-two years old, and of athletic build. He has been studying preparatory to entering college, but his health was so bad that he had been unable to devote much time to nis books. Yesterday morning Wright, accompanied by his nurse, E. W. Curtis, went to breakfast, as usual. He had been excitable and nervous for the last few days, and for this reason his nurse had remained with him all the time. During breakfast Wright became restive and suddenly left the table. His nurse followed him upstairs. Wright seemed to be annoyed that any one should try to soothe him, and suddenly he grasped his hat and left the house. Curtis followed him, and walked along with him, trying to persuade him to return. Wright is of such size and strength that a hand-to-hand tussle with him was not to be thought of, and so Curtis refrained from trying to stop him by force. Curtis had told friends that something would happen to his patient, and that he intended to give up his place, as he was afraid of Wright.

This something happened in the course of the walk. Wright kept on up Fifth-ave, until he and at Third-ave, he shook off Curtis, who had laid a detaining hand upon his arm, and started to run Curtis followed him as best he could. At Avenue A Curtis saw Policeman Edward Donohue, of the East Sixty-seventh-st. station He told him of Wright, and the policeman started after the man, who had continued on down East Seventy-second-st. toward the East River Wright saw the policeman, and he hurried all the faster. There is a stone wall along the bank of the East River at this point, and the police man thought Wright would stop when he encountered the wall, but he did not. Wright sprang lightly over the wall, and then half jumped and Both Curtis and the policeman yelled at Wright to stop, but the latter paid no attention to them. He threw off his coat, and then sat down and took off one of his shoes. Policeman Donohue took off one of his shoes. Policeman Donohue saw that he meant to jump into the river and went after him. Wright did not wait to take off the other shoe, but instead raced out on the bank and plunged into the river. He waded out into the icy water until it reached his armpits. Then, without looking back, he plunged ahead and began to swim toward Blackwell's Island with long, steady strokes. The current was running strongly toward Hell Gate, and the tide swept him up toward Eighty-second-st. He never faitered for a moment, and the people, who were momentarily expecting to see him sink beneath the waters, saw him reach the other side safely, where he was hauled up by a numbre of men in a boat.

The long Island City, to correct the returns of that district which had nominally defeated Patrick J. Gleason for Mayor, was served on the men yester-day for the returns will probably be made to-day.

One of the inspectors, Henry J. Blanc, had a good deal of fun out of the situation. Somehow it became noised about that he intended to leave the

He had followed Wright into the water until he saw that it was useless to pursue him, and then he walked back to the shore and blew his whistle. It was this call that was answered by the guards on Blackwell's Island, who lowered the boat which rescued Wright opposite Eighty-second-st. He made no resistance, and was at once taken to the hospital. He did not seem in the least affected by his cold bath. Later arrangements were made to transfer the man to Bellevue Hospital for examination as to his sanity.

of No. 6 East Forty-ninth-st. It was Dr. Gray who hired Curtis to look after him and act as a nurs The doctor was not inclined to talk about the case yesterday, but it is understood that Wright was suffering from mental trouble brought on by overstudy. His friends have been sent for.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE IN 1856.

A FRENCH VIEW OF THE SITUATION AT THAT TIME IN THE "REVUE DE PARIS."

A cable dispatch stated recently that M. Jules Simon, the famous philosopher and ex-Minister, had declared that, despite his sympathics toward a sister republic, he could not understand how the Monroe Doctrine could be applied to the Venezuelan question. His ideas about it must have changed, for, forty years ago, in a French review. upon which he was one of the principal collabora-tors, together with such celebrated men as Victor Hugo, Michelet, Carnot, sr., Henri Martin, etc., an exhaustive article of thirty-five pages was published in the support of the Monroe Doctrine, in its broadest meaning, and even in favor of Amerition of Mr. Buchanan, and explained that though then crushed, as they were, by royal despotism, would find consolation in the fact that the new President, Mr. Ruchanan, would know how to apply

Here are a few extracts from the article, which was published in the "Revue de Paris" in its numof December 15, 1856, and signed "Felix Aucaigne Aucaigne":

Inspired by the success of the revolutions in South America, which had just succeeded in sharing off the last remnants of Spanish dominion, the Monroe Doctrine received the public and official sanction of the Presidents who succeeded Monroe in the White House, and became the oracle of the great majority of the American people. If the Monroe Doctrine was confined to obstructing projects of colonization in America, European sovereigns would care little or nothing about it. But it is probable that the words of President Monroe have been extended in their meaning. To-day they have a much wider significance than would be expected from a mere resulting of the words. They signify in reality the following:

1. Prohibition to European powers from founding new colonies in America; and by a natural corollary the necessity of driving them out when they interfere in the administration of European colonies.

2. Prohibition to the Kings of the Old World from interfering with any of the annexation projects that the great Republic may have in the New World. No European intervention in American affairs.

So there is a double rôle to play—a double end that the great Republic may have in the New World. No European intervention in American affairs.

So there is a double rôle to play—a double end to be attained. On the one hand, to reduce the Powers of the other continent to inactivity, to the most complete passiveness in all that pertains to the new world; on the other, to leave to Americans the most liberty and latitude possible.

The desire of conquest by force of arms on the part of the Americans is not to be feared; they have no such desire, and never have had. What do they want? The establishment of their influence and of their institutions upon their Continent.

They do not wish to be the all-powerful masters of America; they only wish to be the first Nation, the one to serve as an example to the others; the one to march at the head, torch in hand, in the direction of progress.

Under these circumstances all we can do is to state the facts and present for public consideration our urgent needs, which are that we should have an immediate appropriation of at least $50,000, with which to en-large our present school buildings and procure sites and build new ones."

RYE.

The following appeal has been sent out by the Rev. John E. Burke, of No. 217 Bleecker-st.:

In the name of the Divine Child of Bethlehem, I appeal to all Christians in behalf of the colored orphans of St. Benedict's Home in Rye, N. Y. The home rescues volored boys and girls and trains them to be Christian men and women, and in many cases it shelters and cares for them in its special abode. The institution gets no assistance from city or State. It is supported on charity alone, it greams under heavy debts because even charity draws the "color line," and many of our good citizens, who out of their plenty give to the white orphans, do not think of including the colored orphans in their alms-giving. I ask help for the 173 children of the home, not money for toys and sugar plums, but money for the necessaries of life; money to carry on the work of educating these otherwise neglected children; money that the home may live and grow till it can provide room for the ma, children who at present are crying to get beneath its shelter. Distance lends enchantment to the view, and hence there seems to be with many more of a fascination to instruct and clothe the benighted children on the same of Africa than to similarly provide for the colored children on the sidewalks of New-York, who need more instruction and more clothes, too. Let some of the well-wishers of the colored race help me along, and, let them visit St. Benedict's Home for an object lesson.

During this remarkable swim Policeman Donohue stood upon the bank snivering in wet clothes.

He had followed Wright into the water until plicipalsy. He noticed that Patrick Murchy can State to avoid being served with the order. This rumor reached his ears and he began to act suspiciously. He noticed that Patrick Murphy, one of Geason's achierents, was watching him closely. Mr. Murphy is said to have made a heavy bet that Mr. Gleason would be the man to succeed Mayor Sanford, and was naturally anxious about the outcome. Mr. Blanc appeared at the Queens County Courthouse in the morning. Mr. Murphy was there immediately. When Blanc saw Murphy he shifted his position in the crowd. Murphy followed suit. Blanc then began to dodge in and out and to walk from one place to another. Murphy was always just behind and managed to keep his man in sight, though he had to pursue him finally several miles.

THE TEXAS HAD ANOTHER RUN. STRICT SILENCE OBSERVED AS TO HER TRIP

BEYOND THE HOOK. The battle-ship Texas passed Sandy Hook at 11:50 o'clock yesterday forenoon for an Inspection Board

The recommendations of Captain Glass (after the failure to complete the trial on Thursday last) that the ship be taken to the Brooklyn yard for needed changes in the engine-room drainage system was not approved by the Navy Department, but instead the regular Board of Inspection and Survey, consisting of Captain George Dewey, Captain H. F. Picking, Commander R. B. Bradford, Medical Director W. K. Van Reypen, Chief Engineer R. W. Milligan, Lieutenant-Commander Seaton Schroeder, Naval Constructor William H. Varney, Major Milligan. Lieutenant-Commander Seaton Schroeder, Naval Constructor William H. Varney. Major George C. Reid. Marine Corps, and Lieutenant S. A. Staunton, recorder, was ordered to make the full test of the ship's fitness for service. If the Board finds that the captain's recommendations are justified, the Texas will doubtless be ordered to the yard for the changes which will enable the constructor to run the ship for the four consecutive hours' trail of the engines and still use all the water he needs to keep bearings cool while running at forced speed for a premium. The complete inspection of the Texas will occupy the Board at least two days.

When the Texas was coming up the Bay last night she opened a conversation with the Maine, and this was kept up for over an hour. The Texas reached the place where she finally anchored at 7.35, but for some reason it was 8.25 before the anchor touched the water. In the mean time she was backing and running shead and shifting about. As soon as the anchor went down and before the Texas had taken up the slack of the chain the launch was lowered and the members of the Inspection and Trial Board entered it. Rowboats which put out to the Texas were ordered away by the officer on deck. Information was refused, and all inquiries were referred to the members of the Board. They proceeded at once to the city.

After the Texas anchored an hour's test of the ship's four powerful search-lights was made under the directions of Lieutenant Heliner, chief electrician.

Captain Dewey's board will continue its work to-the directions of Lieutenant Heilner, chief electrician.

Captain Dewey's board will continue its work today with boat drills and other routine exercises. The members of the board are not communicative, but it is understood that they are unusually well pleased with the perfection of organization and efficiency to which the ship has been brought by Captain Glass and his officers during the short time since she was commissioned.

The armored cruiser Maine, the inspection of which was completed at Newport a few days ago by the Board ofwhich Captain George Dewey is the head, arrived at her anchorage off Tompkinsville early yesterday morning and will begin taking on board ammunition and supplies for the vessels of Rear-Admiral Bunce's fleet to-day. The Maine is expected to join the North Atlantic Squadron at Hampton Roads within a few days, and, according to the present programme, will not go to the Brookiyn yard before sailing South. A number of men will be sent from the yard to the Maine for distribution among the vessels of the fleet. The cruiser's torpedoes are all on board, and she is ready for any business that may come in her way.
